Child found, mom facing charges

ABDUCTION RCMP say a two-year-old girl allegedly abducted in southern Alberta has been located unharmed.

Police say little Venus DeJong's grandmother turned her over to the Mounties at the detachment in Jasper.

Arrangements are being made to get the girl home to Redcliff.

The girl's mother, Lola DeJong, 25, made her first court appearance yesterday on a charge of abduction in contravention of a custody order and break and enter. RCMP say a second person is also in RCMP custody awaiting charges.

Young Mountie dies in crash

LINE OF DUTY An RCMP officer barely seven months into her career was killed in a traffic accident early yesterday.

Const. Chelsey Alice Robinson died shortly after midnight when her vehicle was broadsided by a semi-trailer near a highway west of Edmonton.

Robinson was responding to a report of an impaired driver going the wrong way in the westbound lane of Highway 16, a major east-west highway, when her marked cruiser was struck by the truck.

"She was taken to hospital, where she died of her injuries," said Sgt. Tim Taniguchi.

Robinson, 25, was married with no children.

After the collision, the truck veered into the grassy median between the two lanes of the highway and burst into flames. The driver managed to escape and was taken to hospital with non-life-threatening injuries.

"The driver of the tractor-trailer was in no way related to the reported impaired driver," Taniguchi said.

Robinson's fellow members from the Stony Plain detachment were the ones who responded to the accident. "It's a very shocking and very tragic event," Taniguchi said.

Tragic human toll

Two blast victims had kids, says longtime friend

ANDREAS MORSE
andreas.morse@metronews.ca

At least two of the four victims of the north side house explosion on Father's Day had children of their own, according to a longtime friend.

The man who would only give his first name, Greg, said he grew up with the two men and was planning a barbecue with them for later that afternoon.

"I'm feeling disbelief. I'm still waiting for them to call and they won't," Greg said. "They were good friends. If you needed them, they were there."

Greg said the two friends

"I'm feeling disbelief. I'm still waiting for them to call and they won't. They were good friends. If you needed them, they were there." Greg, victims' friend were living together in the home to the left of the house that the explosion originated in. He said one was 26 and the other was 30 but would not give their names. The 26-year-old owned the house and the 30-year-old was staying there. The 26-year-old's fiancée and stepson were also home at the time of the explosion.

Both survived the blast. Deputy police chief Darryl da Costa said homicide detectives are leading the investigation because it's still unclear why the explosion happened and the deaths are being treated as suspicious.

"I'm told by investigators that there's no indication at this point that the blast was caused by an explosive device or a drug lab," da Costa said.

"However, the investigation remains active and ongoing."

He said it may take days or weeks to pinpoint the cause and residents who were displaced will be allowed back into their homes as soon as they're deemed safe. Da Costa couldn't say how long that might take.

"These events are horrific events as we all know and it's horrific to see, not just the physical damage but the emotional damage that so many people in this part of the city (are experiencing)," said Mayor Stephen Mandel from the site known to emergency crews as Ground Zero.

"Our thoughts and prayers go out to them."

Mayor Stephen Mandel speaks at the "Best Bar None" program announcement yesterday.

Program aiming to curtail bar violence

Accreditation available to watering holes

STEFAN STRANGMAN

for Metro Edmonton

Prominent members of Edmonton's political body and bar scene attended a presentation yesterday to kick off "Best Bar None," a pilot program for drinking establishments launched to make nightlife in the capital safer.

The program is based on awards and credit given to watering holes for meeting and exceeding safety standards. The aim of the program is to help reduce the number of fights in Edmonton's night scene, which has seen a rash of alcohol-related violence in the past few months.

The program takes several ideas from an initiative in the United Kingdom, where it has been shown to dramatically reduce violence.

Mayor Stephen Mandel said he hopes the initiative will make the streets safer.

"Cities are all about having fun, but we have to make sure it's safe fun," he said.

As for bargoers, they should be seeing changes take effect soon in the form of plaques at establishments that exceed program standards. Accreditation by the BBN program should make it easier to decide where they can safely enjoy their nights out.

Jesse James, who owns Union Hall in Edmonton, said that by rewarding bars that surpass standards, it will make others compete to be safer in order to gain more business.

"If I see my competitor is accredited and I'm not, then I'm going to want to be accredited too," said James. "It shows that we're complying and trying to do the right thing."

The pilot program is set to finish in the late fall with an awards ceremony, after which it will be assessed and considered for implementation in other parts of the province.

Meat-processing plant undergoing testing

RED DEER The Canadian Food Inspection Agency has confirmed it's investigating an animal health situation at the Olymel meat-processing plant in Red Deer.

CFA spokesman Guy Gravelle says as a precaution and following "routine response procedure," animals aren't being allowed into or out of the plant.

He says inspectors are doing some tests and hope to have results as early as today.

He says there are no indications of any risks to human health.

Earlier in the day, truckloads of hogs were being turned away from the front gates. Truckers at the scene said they weren't being told anything about why they weren't allowed to drop off the livestock.

Cautious relief as forecasts predict less rain in province

FLOODING Rain began falling yet again in southeastern Alberta yesterday, but concerns were diminishing that it would prompt the same destructive flooding that swept the area on the weekend.

Moisture forecasts in Medicine Hat were downgraded to 30 millimetres for the day — down from 70 mm that would likely have seen low-lying areas of the city inundated once again.

Fire Chief Ronald Robinson admitted to feeling "somewhat relieved."

"At this time, the South Saskatchewan River is flowing lower than was anticipated, so we don't believe that the same impact will occur as was experienced this weekend."

It was relief tempered with caution as Environment Canada issued severe weather warnings for most of southern Alberta, including the southeast, which has been soaked with 150 mm of rain over the last several days.

The rain was expected to taper off in Alberta today and move into Saskatchewan.

Labour drought looming?

Report predicts oilpatch will be short 24,000 workers in 2014

Canada's oilpatch may once again be a magnet for workers from across the country and around the world, an economist said yesterday after a study predicted a major labour shortfall in the energy sector by 2014.

Human resources consulting firm Mercer surveyed 135 oil, natural gas and utility companies and found the sector will be short some 24,000 workers in four years.

"I've been expecting labour shortages to lurk their heads once again in Alberta's economy as the recovery takes firmer hold," said Todd Hirsch, a senior economist at ATB Financial.

As a result, a program to recruit temporary workers from abroad may need to be ratcheted up, he added.

"It seemed to take us a long time when the labour shortages were upon us last time to get the temporary foreign worker process up to speed. But once it was up to speed, then companies could bring in those foreign workers very quickly," Hirsch said.

"I think that process will stay in place and I don't think they'll have as much of a time lag getting those foreign workers."

In 2009 and early 2010, Alberta saw more people leaving than coming in. But that's likely to change, Hirsch said.

Gil McGowan, president of the Alberta Federation of Labour, was dubious the province will return to a labour market as tight as the 2005 to 2008 boom.

"We're not going back there, so we can't be cavalier about keeping jobs in the province," he said.

But Ottawa is simply too afraid of the provinces to claim its rightful, constitutional powers over the economy, says Brian Crowley, head of the Macdonald-Laurier Institute, a new public-policy research centre in Ottawa.

"Only a failure of federal nerve has prevented the forceful exercise of this clear power and that failure of nerve, motivated chiefly by a fear of offending the provinces, leaves vital interests of Canadians unprotected," he said yesterday.

The call for an economic charter of rights has been endorsed by key figures from the left and right of the political spectrum — among them Thomas d'Aquino, former head of the Canadian Council of Chief Executives, as well as Tom Axworthy, former principal secretary to prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau was probably the last and most vocal prime-ministerial proponent for the idea of a strong Canadian federal government. Since then, prime ministers have been reluctant to take any steps to enhance or define Ottawa's power in the face of rising provincial power.

Ottawa should stand up to provinces: Report

It's been a long time since anyone argued that the federal government needs more power, but a new report is calling for Ottawa to stand up for itself against the provinces and bring in an economic charter of rights for Canadians.

Exactly 20 years since the death of the Meech Lake constitutional accord — an epic Canadian struggle between federal and provincial power — a new think-tank is arguing that Ottawa needs to flex its muscles against the provincial barriers to free trade of goods and services within Canada.

The demand flies in the face of conventional political wisdom, especially from Prime Minister Stephen Harper's Conservative government, that Ottawa

IEDs have been the single biggest cause of death among Canadian troops in Afghanistan. Eight out of the 10 Canadian deaths this year were the result of an IED blast. In all, 89 of the 148 Canadian fatalities in the eight-year-old Afghan mission came about from IEDs — which include roadside bombs and some other type of explosives, according to the Department of Defence.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper paid tribute to MacNeil and sent condolences to the soldier's family, friends and comrades.

Leaders urged to focus on workers ahead of summits

Group speaks out prior to G8/G20 meetings

International labour organizers say they have a message for world leaders ahead of the G8 and G20 summits: Things must change.

Leaders of the International Trade Union Confederation, which is holding its world congress in Vancouver ahead of the summits in Ontario later this week, say they will tell international leaders that there won't be economic recovery without jobs.

In fact, a large part of the confederation's second World Congress, entitled Now The People, will look at the global economic crisis and how the congress believes leaders should proceed.

The group's general secretary, Guy Ryder, and Canadian Labour Congress President Ken Georgetti met with Prime Minister Stephen Harper on Friday to relay the message.

Ryder said global economic recovery is extremely fragile and unemployment levels are still far too high.

"I take away from the meeting his repeated phrase — and I welcome it — that between fiscal consolidation and job creation, he said 'it's a balancing act,'" he said on the first day of the congress.

The confederation, which represents 176 million union workers around the globe, will also meet with German Chancellor Angela Merkel, Australia's Kevin Rudd and other world leaders during the upcoming summits in Ontario.

Georgetti told reporters

"(Working people have) been the victims of this greed."

Sharan Burrow
president, ITUC

at a news conference yesterday at the opening of the gathering that global leaders need to take more than just finance into account.

"They've ignored them for too long and the results, as we've seen in the last 20 to 25 months, have been stark and startling," Georgetti said.

Delegates at the conference will debate a resolution demanding deep reform to the International Monetary suffering it has brought," says the resolution.

Ryder said they worry as the problem appears to ease for certain financial institutions and on world markets.

"The initial impetus and imperative for regulation is going to recede and we believe the G20 leaders must not let that happen."

Sharan Burrow, ITUC president, said working people around the world are angry about this financial crisis developed by the corporate sector.

"They know that they've, in fact, been the victims of this greed," she said. "People lost their jobs, they lost working hours, the lost pension entitlements, in many cases they

Fund, World Bank, and World Trade Organization.

"Working people are angered by the cause of the crisis and feel a deep sense of injustice at the massive lost their homes." The confederation believes some kind of financial transaction tax is essential, but Harper has aggressively opposed such a tax.

Lawyer chides MP's remarks on arson case

OTTAWA A lawyer for one of the men accused of firebombing an Ottawa bank is taking the federal government to task for commenting on the charges.

Lawrence Greenspon said yesterday it's not right for public figures to talk about a case before the courts, noting a presumption of innocence is "a fundamental pillar of our criminal justice system."

"And I think it's at the very least inappropriate to have public figures commenting on the nature of charges once those charges have been laid," said Greenspon, who represents 58-year-old Ottawa resident Roger Clement.

Public Safety Minister Vic Toews issued a statement Saturday applauding police shortly after they held a rare Saturday morning news conference to announce charges against Clement and two other Ottawa men.

Medical journal calls for resignation over tobacco link

HEALTH The Canadian Medical Association Journal has added its voice to calls that a former federal cabinet minister resign from the International Development Research Centre.

The journal says Barbara McDougall should step down as chair of the IDRC board at a two-day meeting beginning today because she was also, until recently, on the board of Imperial Tobacco Canada.

McDougall, who has been chair of the IDRC since 2007, resigned from the Imperial Tobacco board in April of this year. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation cancelled a $5.2-million grant to the Crown corporation early this year when it learned of McDougall's tobacco industry involvement.

The medical journal says having McDougall chair the board contravenes the international Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, which prohibits tobacco industry involvement in the research and development sector.

IDRC helps developing countries find solutions to socio-economic and environmental problems through knowledge and science.

"Ms. McDougall's ongoing role on IDRC's board has undermined the institution's reputation and her effectiveness as chair," write the authors of the editorial. "Ms. McDougall, who has had a distinguished record of public service, would best serve IDRC by stepping aside."

In early May the journal Open Medicine also called for McDougall to resign the IDRC job.

Oilsands remarks retracted

Alberta government scientist takes back claims critics faked data

Legal pressure has forced a senior Alberta government scientist to retract highly public statements saying two prominent oilsands critics lied and fudged their data.

In a letter to the scientists he questioned, Preston McEachern — head of oilsands research for Alberta Environment — now says he was the one who lied.

"The statements in my presentation that you did these things were false and I regret very much that I made these statements," he said in a letter to Peter Lee of Global Forest Watch and independent biologist Kevin Timoney.

"I just wonder why the government seems so reluctant to discuss the actual science rather than just do these attacks on people."

Kevin Timoney, independent biologist

"We are just simply trying to do our jobs and ask questions based on the data," Timoney said yesterday.

"To be defamed like this is deeply troubling. I just wonder why the government seems so reluctant to discuss the actual science rather than just do these attacks on people."

In a paper published last fall, Timoney and Lee attempted to summarize evidence that oilsands projects pollute the environment. The report concluded that it may be too late to determine exactly how much of the contaminants come from industry and how much are natural. It suggested more research is necessary as the industry expands.

In March, McEachern made a formal presentation at the University of Alberta in which he accused Lee and Timoney of lying and using data selectively.

"I was in the audience when he said that," said Lee. "I was gobsmacked."

McEachern had not attempted to contact either scientist with his concerns before making the statements, Timoney said.

But after the two contacted lawyers and made a formal complaint, McEachern's climbdown was complete. "You did not lie," he wrote. "You did not choose to remove data from your study."

Adult sentences sought in B.C. student's murder

CRIME The Crown says it will seek adult sentences if two teenaged boys are convicted in the murder of an 18-year-old high school student near Victoria.

The 16- and 18-year-old boys, who cannot be named, made their first appearance in court in Victoria yesterday charged with first-degree murder in the killing of Kimberly Proctor of Langford in March.

The boys were ordered to appear in court again on July 6.

Crown prosecutor Peter Juk filed a motion seeking adult sentences for the accused, who were arrested Friday and charged with murder, unlawful confinement, sexual assault and indignity to human remains.

The police say Proctor knew both teens and they believe her killing was not random.

Her burned body was found along a popular hiking trail near Victoria on March 19.

Formal charges were expected to be laid today.

Political football in France

How a disappointing performance at the World Cup is sowing a national crisis of sorts

When France won the World Cup in 1998, poll numbers of top French political leaders surged and the country claimed vindication for its model of assimilating ethnic minorities from former African colonies.

How times have changed.

Instead of projecting an image to the world of racial harmony steeped in Republican values of liberty, equality, and fraternity, this year's squad has plunged into fratricidal conflicts playing out in the locker rooms, the press, and most crucially on the playing field.

Along the way, France is being pilloried worldwide — and politicians from the finance minister to the president himself are getting involved. Even a Parisian Left Bank philosopher has aired musings about a "hooligan culture" gripping the nation.

It isn't just that the "Bleus" — as the national team has been affectionately known in better days — have turned in back-to-back dismal performances that have left them winless and on the verge of elimination.

What has riled the French perhaps even more has been the surreal spectacle of their sporting heroes refusing to train, their star striker being sent home after an obscene locker-room tirade, and the sense of drift and even indifference they have demonstrated on the field.

The fortunes of the football team have also taken on a political dimension at a time when Sarkozy's poll numbers have been sagging and the national mood was already soured by austerity measures announced in a tough economic climate.

Sarkozy's rivals on the left and right have wasted no time in trying to win points from the World Cup fiasco.

A Socialist lawmaker went so far as to see a political parallel in the sporting disaster: Conservative Sarkozy, suggested Jerome Cahuzac, has fostered the

Calls from top for 'dignity'

FRANCE The crisis has spurred French President Nicolas Sarkozy into action. Over the weekend, he ordered his sports minister to prolong her stay in South Africa to knock some sense into France's bickering squad. "He like myself, we are taking note of the indignation of the French people and calling for dignity and responsibility," said Roselyne Bachelot.

During a press conference in Russia, Sarkozy described as "unacceptable" French star Nicolas Anelka's profanity-laced rant against coach Raymond Domenech that cost him a spot on the team. Finance Minister Christine Lagarde, a former member of the French synchronized swimming team, reached far beyond her portfolio to issue a stinging criticism of the team.

"I am appalled because I have worn the French national colours, and when you wear the French national colours you have added responsibilities," she told French TV.

Iran says it bans two UN nuclear inspectors

Higher radiation levels a mystery

KOREAS Abnormally high radiation levels were detected near the border between the two Koreas days after North Korea claimed to have mastered a complex technology key to manufacturing a hydrogen bomb, Seoul said yesterday.

The Science Ministry said its investigation ruled out a nuclear test by North Korea, but failed to determine the source of the radiation. It said there was no evidence of an earthquake, which follows an atomic explosion.

On May 12, North Korea claimed its scientists succeeded in creating a nuclear fusion reaction — a technology necessary to manufacture a hydrogen bomb. In its announcement, the North did not say how it would use the technology, only calling it a "breakthrough toward the development of new energy."

Experts doubted the North actually made such a breakthrough. Scientists around the world have been experimenting with fusion for decades, but it has yet to be developed into a viable energy alternative.

On May 15, however, the atmospheric concentration of xenon — an inert gas released after a nuclear explosion or radioactive leakage from a nuclear power plant — on the South Korean side of their shared border was found to be eight times higher than normal, according to South Korea's Science Ministry.

Killer arrested on child porn charges

ENGLAND British prosecutors said yesterday that a man convicted of murdering a toddler in 1993, when he himself was just 10 years old, has been charged with child pornography offences.

Jon Venables, 27, was charged with downloading and distributing indecent photographs of children. Venables was indicted earlier, but the charges could only be reported yesterday after a judge ordered some reporting restrictions lifted.

Venables and another 10-year-old, Robert Thompson, lured two-year-old James Bulger away from a shopping centre in Liverpool in 1993 and beat him to death by an isolated railway line.

The crime shocked Britain because of the ages of the victim and his baby-faced killers, and was seared into the national memory through closed-circuit video footage of the two older boys leading the toddler away to his death.

Venables and Thompson were released from juvenile detention in 2001.

French man on trial in prison cannibalism case

FRANCE A prisoner went on trial yesterday and acknowledged killing his cellmate and then eating part of the man's lung.

Nicolas Cocaign, charged with murder and acts of barbarism, told the court in northwestern France that he is now getting psychiatric treatment and feels "stable."

After the charges against Cocaign were read in court, the 39-year-old said he was responsible.

Thierry Baudry's mutilated body was found Jan. 3, 2007 by a prison guard, and an autopsy revealed two chest muscles and part of his left lung were missing.

At the time, Rouen prosecutor Joseph Schmit said Cocaign confessed to stabbing his victim with scissors and suffocating him with a plastic bag before removing and eating part of an organ from his chest — though he mistakenly believed it was the victim's heart.

Cocaign, whose face is tattooed with images including bloody tears and a skull, told investigators he had wanted to eat the victim's heart to "take his soul," according to the indictment.

At the time, Cocaign was serving a sentence for at-

Defence lawyer Fabien Picchiottino said his client had repeatedly asked to be committed to a psychiatric ward before the killing, but his requests were turned down by authorities.

Baudry's mother said she had long dreaded seeing Cocaign in person.

"I want to know why he did this to my son," Jacqueline Baudry said. "I want him to pay."

Yesterday's hearing traced Cocaign's life, from his adoption at age three to his run-ins with the law. He risks life in prison. A verdict is expected later this week.

A third inmate, David Lagrue, was present in the cell during the attack. Lagrue, who was initially suspected of complicity but was later cleared, committed suicide last year in another prison.

Not great timing

North Korea airs live game, team loses 7-0

North Korea picked the wrong moment to allow its people to see a bit more of the outside world.

The authoritarian regime was so proud of its soccer team in the World Cup that it allowed an unprecedented live broadcast back home of the match against Portugal — a rarity for the communist nation that normally exerts strict control over the media.

What ensued was a different sort of history: North Koreans, used to seeing only positive news about their reclusive country, watched as their soccer team received the worst drubbing so far in this year's tournament and was prevented from advancing to the next round.

As the 7-0 loss to Portugal concluded, the North Koreans quickly halted yesterday's coverage.

It then cut to factory workers and engineers praising North Korean leader Kim Jong Il.

Kim and his totalitarian leadership allow only one state-run TV channel, ban shortwave foreign radio broadcasts and restrict outside Internet access to the elite. Yet coverage of the 2010 World Cup has been unprecedented, with state TV airing tape-delayed video of a number of matches in full — including that of rival South Korea — despite questions about how the broadcaster would get the feed.

In the past, only snippets of World Cup games were shown, sometimes weeks later. In 2002 and 2006, a South Korean broadcaster relayed live video as part of reconciliation efforts with the wartime rival, but North Korea chose to show only tape-delayed parts of matches.

Negotiations began last year to provide video again, but stalled amid rising tensions over the sunken warship. South Korea's SBS television, which owns the broadcast rights for the entire Korean peninsula, said it would not beam the World Cup to North Korea. In a last-minute deal, Malaysia-based Asia-Pacific Broadcasting Union offered North Korea free live coverage.

Nervous but excited, goalkeeper Ri Myong Guk's older brother and other relatives settled in at his in-laws' apartment outside Pyongyang with beer and snacks to view yesterday's game.

"Watching the game live, I felt like I was in South Africa myself," the brother, Ri Myong Il, told APTN in Pyongyang.

But three Portugal goals in the second half in a matter of minutes were met with silence by Ri's family. By the fourth goal, all hope was gone. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PM's message control

National Report

Lawrence Martin

Anyone who has worked with Stephen Harper will tell you his No. 1 priority is message control. Control the message and you control outcomes.

That's why, upon becoming prime minister in 2006, he put in place the most all-encompassing vetting system Ottawa had ever seen. Nothing could go out, not even the most minor of communications, without approval from head office.

But to control the message, you have to have influence in the media. So how's this for a coup? Harper now has one of his former directors of communications, Kory Teneycke, as de facto boss of Sun Media coverage. The same Teneycke is also leading the bid from the same organization to create a new conservative television network.

On the newspaper side, Teneycke has already overhauled Sun Media's Ottawa bureau. Several good reporters have been moved out.

The replacements are good reporters as well. But anyone who doesn't think they will be under pressure to provide a Conservative spin is deluding themselves. The changes were made for a purpose. The purpose was hardly to have the new hires rushing out to hold the government's feet to the fire.

On the TV side, the new network needs regulatory approval to get up and running. The CRTC will be under tremendous pressure to provide it. As has been demonstrated, Harper does not take kindly to tribunals or commissions that go against his wishes. Those who sit on them can be replaced or have their decisions overturned.

Chances of the PM standing idly by and watching this network proposal get shelved are next to nil. The new network won't be as biased as Fox News in the United States, its promoters claim. But in attacking the work of the CBC's Don Newman, they showed their true colours. If they had one-half the experience, the depth and the erudition of Newman, they should consider themselves lucky.

Having one of his former promoters running Sun Media is just one of two great media turns for the prime minister. The other was the recent auction of the Canwest newspapers. Just when it looked like the conservative flagship, The National Post, and the chain's other big-city newspapers were about to be taken over by liberally inclined buyers, Canwest's Paul Godfrey came to the rescue with an 11th-hour bid that will keep the papers in the conservative stable.

Harper stood on the verge of losing the media balance of power in the country. Not only has he maintained it. He has now increased it.

Lawrence Martin is a journalist and author of 10 books who writes about national affairs from Ottawa.

Time to gaze at clouds or take a deep breath

Yesterday was International Slowness Day and the best way to celebrate, according to one of its organizers, was to take a deep breath. Or maybe stare at the clouds passing by.

Clemence Boucher, a Montreal community worker, got together with some friends in 2001 and picked June 21 — the longest day of the year — to kick off her movement.

The mother of three said she first thought of the idea of a slowness day in March 2001 during a period when she was under a lot of stress.

Her movement is taking off... slowly.

Nine years into the event, there were a few dozen participants at a downtown Montreal park yesterday, all relaxing and enjoying music, art and yoga. Use of electricity was a no-no and there were no blaring loudspeakers to stress anyone out.

Boucher had suggestions for how to celebrate International Slowness Day.

Drug addicts as young as one month old. Mothers who calm their children by blowing opium smoke in their faces. Whole communities hooked on heroin with few opportunities for treatment.

Use of opiates such as heroin and opium has doubled in Afghanistan in the last five years, the UN said yesterday, as hundreds of thousands of Afghans turn to drugs to escape the misery of poverty and war.

Nearly three per cent of Afghans aged 15 to 64 are addicted to opiates, according to a study by the UN Office on Drugs and Crime. The UN defines addicts as regular users. That puts Afghanistan, along with Russia and Iran, as the top three countries for opiate drug use worldwide, according to Sarah Waller, an official of the UN's drug office in Kabul. She said a 2005 survey found about 1.4 per cent of Afghan adults were opiate addicts.

The data suggest that even as the U.S. and its allies pour billions of dollars into programs to try to wean the Afghan economy off of drug money, opium and heroin have become more entrenched in the lives of ordinary Afghans. That creates yet another barrier to international efforts to combat the drug trade, which helps pay for the Taliban insurgency. Afghanistan supplies 90 per cent of the world's opip-um, the main ingredient in heroin, and is the global leader in hashish production. Drug crops have helped finance insurgents and encourage corruption, particularly in the south where the Taliban control cultivation of opium poppies and smuggling routes.

Almost one million Afghans — eight per cent of the 15 to 64 age group — are regular drug users, addicted to opiates, as well as cannabis and tranquilizers, according to the report, which was based on surveys of about 2,500 drug users, community leaders, teachers and doctors.

Canada is envy of world

Canada thinks it can teach the world a thing or two about dodging financial meltdowns.

The 20 world leaders at an economic summit in Toronto this weekend will find themselves in a country that has avoided a banking crisis where others have floundered, and whose economy grew at a 6.1 per cent annual rate in the first three months of this year. The housing market is hot and three-quarters of the 400,000 jobs lost during the recession have been recovered.

G20 Summit

Obama says the U.S. should take note of Canada's banking system, and Britain's treasury chief is looking to emulate the Ottawa way on cutting deficits.

George Osborne, Britain's treasury chief, has vowed to follow Canada's example on deficit reduction.

"They brought together the best brains both inside and outside government to carry out a fundamental reassessment of the role of the state," Osborne said in a speech.

The land of a thousand stereotypes — from Mounties and ice hockey to language wars and lousy weather — is feeling entitled to do a bit of crowing as it hosts the G20 summit of wealthy and developing nations.

"We should be proud of the performance of our financial system during the crisis," said Finance Minister Jim Flaherty in an interview with The Associated Press.

"Our banks were just better managed and we had better regulation," said former prime minister Paul Martin, the man credited with killing off a massive government deficit in the 1990s when he was finance minister, leading to 12 straight years of budget surpluses. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spin Master files suit against Crayola

TRADEMARK A Canadian toy maker is suing Crayola, alleging the U.S.-based crayon and marker maker has infringed on one of its trademark names.

Spin Master Ltd., a Toronto-based company that produces the Liv dolls and bills itself as North America's third-largest toy company, said in a brief statement yesterday that it will "fight vigorously" to defend its trademarks.

"It's very important to avoid confusion in the marketplace," Spin Master spokesman Harold Chizick said in an interview.

Fashion dolls

- Spin Master launched the Liv doll, fashion dolls aimed at girls six to 10 years old, last year. Liv has a strong online component, aided by the company's decision three years ago to establish online studios for marketing.

Chizick said Crayola has a line it's planning to introduce that's also called "Liv," but he couldn't say if the product will be a doll. "It's a name, it's a trademark," said Chizick, vice-president of global communications and promotions at Spin Master.

The case is expected to be heard in California, Chizick said, adding the suit was filed April 26. He didn't say how much Spin Master is seeking in damages. Crayola is a Pennsylvania-based subsidiary of Hallmark Cards of Kansas City, Mo. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tips for good credit scores

Alison On Money

griffiths.alison@gmail.com

When was the last time you checked your credit history and score? If it was within six to 12 months go to the head of the class. If you said never or a couple of years ago then you don the dunce cap.

A strong credit score has never been more important. A poor one can stand in the way of everything from getting a car loan, a mortgage or even renting an apartment.

You can access an abbreviated credit report free from equifax.ca or transunion.ca. A full report plus your score will cost from $7.95 to $23.95. A credit score of 750 or above from either agency is considered good.

Here are some tips for a credit history.

- Do pay your bills on time. Late payments will drag down your score.

- Do pay at least the minimum plus a bit more on any bill, loan, line of credit or credit card.

- Do check your monthly bank and credit card statements to make sure every charge is correct.

- Do read your credit card statements for changes to things like interest rates and fees.

- Do contact creditors (including utility, phone and insurance companies) if you are having trouble paying your bills. You may get some extra time before the company reports late or non-payments.

- Do build up a strong history with regular credit card use but pay the balance in full every month.

- Don't go over your credit card limit and don't dip into your overdraft regularly. Both will lower your credit score.

- Don't apply for too many retail credit cards. You may get a discount on purchases when you apply but having a large amount of credit available, even if you don't use it, can lower your credit score.

- Don't delay in reporting suspicious transactions on any bank account or credit card.

- Don't be tempted with Buy Now Pay Later schemes if your credit score is marginal or poor as many of them are actually credit cards and will affect your score.

Choosing an insurance policy that's right for you

HOME INSURANCE We all know we should insure our homes, but when it comes to choosing the right policy, many of us don't know what is — or isn't — covered. Henry Blumenthal, vice-president and chief underwriter for TD Insurance, answers some common questions.

What does a typical home insurance policy cover?

A standard home insurance policy will ensure that if something like fire, vandalism or theft occurs, your property will be looked after and your valuables replaced. This type of policy is called "named perils" since it provides protection based on a list of the most common risks.

When do you need additional insurance?

A standard home insurance policy has limitations in theft coverage for items, such as jewelry and furs, bicycles, cash, boats and motors. If you have any of these special items, it's a good idea to consider adding additional coverage to your policy. If you're unsure, call your insurance provider to confirm that your valuables are covered.

For more comprehensive building coverage, homeowners can opt for "all risk" coverage, which insures your building for everything unless it is specifically excluded from your policy.

Are there any considerations I should keep in mind when choosing a policy?

Depending on where you live, you may want to purchase additional coverage to protect your home from unique circumstances, such as earthquakes or flooding. For example, TD Insurance offers water damage coverage as an add-on. While home insurance does offer some water damage coverage, there are limits to this protection.

Federer survives scare in first round at Wimbledon

Six-time champion Roger Federer overcame a two-set deficit to avert a monumental first-round upset at Wimbledon, beating Alejandro Falla 5-7, 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (1), 6-0 yesterday.

Federer has reached the tournament final each of the past seven years, but he barely survived the traditional opening match on Centre Court as defending champion.

"I live another day," Federer said. "This one is one I should have lost. That's sometimes how grass-court tennis works."

Falla, ranked 60th, had lost all 11 sets in his previous four matches against Federer, but the Colombian played brilliant tennis to take charge of the match early. The turnaround came in the fourth set with Falla serving for the match and three points from victory, when Federer broke for only the second time.

He played his best tennis of the day after that.

It's the third time in a row he has won after losing the first two sets at a Grand Slam event, but the close call was a new experience in such an early round.

"You definitely feel uncomfortable," Federer said. "For me, it's not normal to

Bruins, Oilers won't tip hands on draft plans for top 2 picks

NHL The Edmonton Oilers and Boston Bruins, who own the top two picks in this weekend's NHL draft, have done all they can to evaluate top prospects Taylor Hall and Tyler Seguin.

Now the teams have to figure each other out.

The Oilers aren't saying which way they are leaning, hoping to extract some concessions from the Bruins in a trade that would allow Edmonton to still draft the player it wants at No. 1 overall. The Bruins insist that they will be happy at No. 2 with whichever skater the Oilers don't choose.

"Right now, as of today, we have one guy over the other. But it's very close," Bruins general manager Peter Chiarelli said yesterday. "Nothing is really imminent now. There's no pressure. There's really no need to talk in detail right now."

Chiarelli said he spoke again with Oilers counterpart Steve Tambellini over the weekend, but until the deadline of the draft looms larger the conversations don't seem to be zeroing in on a deal.

"We both don't want to play any cards to each other right now, if we have any to play," Chiarelli said.

Hall and Seguin, who tied for the Ontario Hockey League scoring lead, are the consensus top two picks in the draft, but there's little to separate them. Seguin was the league MVP; Hall is the only player in the 92-year history of the Memorial Cup to win the tournament MVP in back-to-back years.

Portugal eliminates North Korea with blowout victory

GROUP G RESULT

Portugal 7 North Korea 0

Portugal revived its World Cup campaign with a 7-0 rout of North Korea in Group G yesterday, eliminating the Asian team from the competition.

Cristiano Ronaldo scored the sixth goal of the game, his first in a competitive match for the national team since the 2008 European Championship.

Ronaldo also set up Tiago's first goal in the 60th. Tiago added another for the 2006 World Cup semifinalists in the 89th, while Raul Meireles, Simao Sabrosa, Hugo Almeida and Liedson also scored.

"It was a great day for Portugal and Portuguese football," coach Carlos Queiroz said. "The players are really happy with the way they played, the attitude for the game, the beautiful football, the beautiful goals."

The win moves Portugal into second place in Group G with four points, two behind Brazil. The Ivory Coast has one point, and North Korea is out of the tournament after two straight losses. It was the most one-sided World Cup match since Germany routed Saudi Arabia 8-0 in 2002.

Personal Gourmet recipe of the month

ROSE REISMAN

Savory salads

Spinach Salad with Candied Pecans, Pears and Brie

PREP TIME: 15 MINUTES

COOK TIME: 15 MINUTES

This is the number-one salad in my catering company. The sweet and savory combination of cinnamon-sugared pecans, ripe pears and small morsels of brie is sensational. There is very little oil in this, but you won't miss it.

You can easily make this a main meal salad by adding some grilled chicken or shrimp.

SERVES 8

INGREDIENTS:

- 1/3 cup pecan halves
- 3 Tbsp icing sugar
- 1/4 tsp cinnamon
- 1/8 tsp allspice
- 1/8 tsp nutmeg
- 8 cups baby spinach leaves
- 1 cup diced radicchio
- 1 large ripe pear, peeled, cored and diced
- 2 oz brie, diced
- 2 Tbsp orange juice concentrate, thawed
- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- 1 Tbsp balsamic vinegar
- 1 tsp minced garlic
- 1/2 tsp liquid honey
- 1/2 tsp Dijon mustard

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 350°F. Spray a baking sheet with cooking oil.

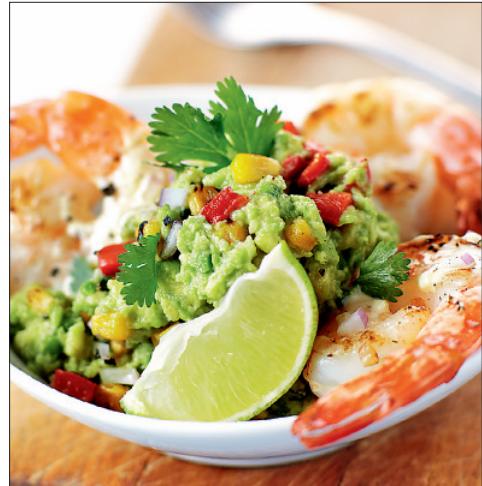

2. Rinse the pecans with cold water. Drain, but do not let them dry. Combine the icing sugar, cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg in a small bowl. Dip the pecans in the sugar mixture, coating them well. Spread on the prepared baking sheet.

3. Bake for 15 minutes in the center of the oven. Remove and cool. When they're cool enough to handle, chop coarsely.

4. Combine the spinach, radicchio, pear and brie in a large serving bowl.

5. Whisk the juice concentrate, oil, vinegar, garlic, honey and mustard together in a small bowl. Pour the dressing over the salad and toss to coat. Garnish with the candied pecans.

Shrimp, Avocado and Feta Salad

PREP TIME: 15 MINUTES

COOK TIME: 3 MINUTES

This amazing salad is so filling you'll need only a small portion. Dice the avocado just before you're ready to serve, or squeeze some lemon juice over it to prevent browning if you prepare it earlier in the day.

Always be sure to weigh your shrimp after it has been peeled. For each pound of peeled shrimp, you need to purchase approximately 1 1/4 pounds of shrimp in the shell. Purchase cooked cocktail shrimp if you don't want to bother cooking raw shrimp.

SERVES 6

INGREDIENTS:

- 16 oz large shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 3 cups diced and seeded plum tomatoes
- 1 cup diced ripe avocado
- 1/3 cup chopped cilantro or parsley
- 1/4 cup diced red onion
- 1/2 cup light feta cheese, crumbled
- 2 Tbsp olive oil
- 2 Tbsp freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 1 1/2 tsp minced fresh

Fight pregnancy skin problems

hormones can cause many changes to women's skin in nine months

HEATHER BUCHAN
for Metro Canada

It's no surprise that hormones play an important role in the condition of our skin. And that's why pregnant women in particular are prone to a host of unnerving skin changes including acne, pigmentation and stretch marks.

It's increased levels in estrogen and progesterone that allow for a viable pregnancy, but it's these hormones that can also wreak havoc on the skin.

According to Danielle Edwards, the education manager at The International Dermal Institute, what happens to our skin during pregnancy is essentially out of our control.

Although that's no great comfort, she adds that you can combat pregnancy-related skin conditions simply by adjusting your skincare routine and being diligent about moisturizing your entire body every day.

Being diligent about moisturizing your body can help combat pregnancy-related skin conditions.

PIGMENTATION

The mask of pregnancy, formally called chloasma, mainly affects women with darker complexions. Essentially, it's discoloured patches of skin that form in a masklike configuration over the forehead, nose and cheeks.

This is because the cell that produces pigment, called the melanocyte cell, is controlled by estrogen, explains Edwards. The good news is that chloasma generally fades a few months after delivery.

Pregnancy also makes women more prone to hyperpigmentation, so freckles and moles become darker and more noticeable. Sun exposure can intensify discoloration, so avoid prolonged sun exposure and be sure to always wear SPF when outside.

"If you haven't been protecting yourself from the sun, hyperpigmentation becomes more difficult to treat at the end of the pregnancy," says Edwards.

STRETCH MARKS

Most women develop stretch marks across their belly and breasts.

"These marks are caused by tiny tears in the tissue that lies just below your skin and enables it to stretch," explains Edwards.

Depending on complexion, stretch marks can be pink, reddish-brown or dark brown. Like pigmentation, stretch marks generally fade after delivery. But the key to keeping them under control is to keep the skin supple by hydrating. Although no cream will actually stop the tearing of the skin as it stretches, applying moisturizing creams will increase the integrity of the skin.

And, Edwards recommends applying vitamin E to any stretch marks you notice forming. "It's a great skin healer," she says.

ACNE

The increase in estrogen and progesterone can cause sebaceous glands to release more oil, resulting in breakouts. Edwards warns that women who are prone to breakouts during their menstrual cycles are more prone to acne during pregnancy.

"On the whole, the way your body was before will govern the way it is during pregnancy," says Edwards.

Edwards recommends washing your face with a gentle cleanser both morning and night, using an oil-free moisturizer (to avoid clogging pores) and using a mild exfoliator once or twice a week.

Pregnancy

skin care

no-no's

Here are some tips on things to avoid doing while pregnant.

- Stay away from using pure essential oils on your skin, especially during the first and second trimesters as they can enter the bloodstream. Research is still being conducted on what type of effects they can have on fetuses.

- Avoid dermatological treatments that involve galvanic, high frequency, micro-current or laser and microdermabrasion as they pass an electrical current through the body.

- If you're unsure of any skin care ingredient, consult your doctor or dermatologist before using it.

How to stay intimate after giving birth

The J Spot

Josey Vogels

the guy enough to make a baby together. Surely, there's a spark at least smoldering in there somewhere for him.

But how do you go from smoldering to hot again?

TAKE IT EASY ON YOURSELF

There is no rule about when you should start having sex again. The postpartum period is a time of huge changes in your body, your hormones, your lifestyle, your sense of self and your relationship. Some women are ready for sex after six weeks, other six months. You'll know when you're ready.

TALK ABOUT IT

He can hardly know how you're feeling about sex if you don't tell him. And no, "Get your hands off me, it's enough with the baby sucking the life out of me without having you pawing at me" is not considered effective communication despite how true it may be. Assure him that you love him but you need him to be patient with you right now and tune into your needs.

MAKE A DATE

If you're not ready for sex, you can still be intimate. Date nights, baths, tender kisses and massages are all good ways to physically nurture each other until you're ready to have intercourse again.

LOVE YOURSELF

A lot of women feel like their body has been taken over by aliens after giving birth. Doing something nice for yourself — like getting a pedicure — will make you feel prettier, sexier and like you may actually have ownership of your body again one day. A trip to the gym will not only make you feel better physically, the endorphins and adrenalin will help kickstart your libido.

DON'T IGNORE YOUR GUY

New fathers sometimes feel rejected when he realizes mom's found a new first love — her baby. Make an effort to include him. For example, if you're breastfeeding you may want to invest in a breast pump so that you can fill bottles and let him feed and bond with the baby. And you're free to go for that pedicure!

A way with words

Passionate rhymes fuel hip-hop artist D-Sisive

The Audio Files

Bryan Borzykowski

metronews.ca/music

When I heard D-Sisive's first EP, The Book, two years ago, I was absolutely floored. The rapper, whose real name is Derek Christoff, spoke brutally honestly about his parents' death — his father died in 2006 of psoriasis of the liver; his mother passed away of breast cancer in 1997.

His candid lyrics shook me — my wife's mother died of cancer around that time so much of what he said resonated in a strange and sometimes disturbing way. But I wasn't the only one who was mesmerized by his words.

Since then he developed a rabid fanbase and while he's a strong rapper, it's his passionate rhymes that he hopes people will remember him for. "I'm not trying to be the best rapper alive," he says tells Metro. "My goal is to be respected as a songwriter."

That's why he says he's been "harassing" Ron Sexsmith to sing on one of his records for years. "He's got a career that I pray I can have," says Christoff. "He's respected by the best songwriters in the world."

Sexsmith finally sang on D-Sisive's new record — Vaudeville — on the song Liberace, about homosexuality and having to hide your real self.

Christoff may have to put out a few more albums before Sexsmith fans such as Elvis Costello and Paul McCartney start singing his praises, but make no mistake, it's going to happen. D-Sisive doesn't focus on his parents' death, and self-sabotaging his first chance at a rap career (he was courted by majors in the early 2000s) like he did on his EP and subsequent two LPs, but his words are no less direct and thought-provoking.

The reggae-tinged Never Knew Me could be about a failed relationship, or perhaps he's looking back at his old, ego-driven self. Either way its vivid lyrics like "this is it eh? Who would have thought the seams would have ripped the jeans were a fit, blame it on the rain or the weight gain know my hat size it's all passé" that will keep his career going well into this decade.

It also helps that he has a sense of humour. While his first records, especially The Book, were bleak, Vaudeville is full of pop culture references and genuinely funny moments.

Christoff purposely made a lighter record, starting with the title of the disc. "When I referred to this record I said it will be my song and dance disc," he says. "It wasn't going to be another 'I'm so sad, no one likes me album' — I'm going to get happy and bring the jiggy back."

But even though he's a sap singing about romance on I Love a Girl, he doesn't want people to think he's gone too soft. "I could put out an album with 13 I Love a Girl's, but at the end of the day give me a mic and two turntables and I'll still whoop your a—."

Old friends bond over comedy

NED EHRBAR
 Metro World News

For Adam Sandler, putting together the cast of Grown Ups was something of a no-brainer.

The film follows five childhood friends (Sandler, Chris Rock, David Spade, Kevin James and Rob Schneider) who reunite as adults for a Fourth of July weekend.

"The whole idea was about putting together old friends who get to hang out together for a weekend," Sandler says. "And these guys are my old friends, so that made total sense. I'm glad they said yes to it."

He's quick to admit, though, that the pals and comedy veterans were hardly long-lost friends. "In real life it ain't much of a reunion. We see each other enough," he explains. "So it's not like this gang hasn't seen each other in 30 years. We see each other a lot. In fact, I see my friends from growing up a lot. There's no reunions in my life. I see everybody too much."

Getting a group of comic actors like that together obviously meant a decent amount of improvisation.

Director Dennis Dugan admits he didn't have as much to do as on other films.

"I had the easiest job in the entire world," Dugan says. "My job basically was to say, 'Action,' and they'd talk sometimes for 40 min-

Green Zone

Director: Paul Greengrass

PAUL GREENGRASS IS part journalist and part action filmmaker, switching between docudramas such as United 93 to commercial blockbusters like the two Jason Bourne movies he's made with Damon. Both sides of Greengrass's personality are on display in Green Zone, which many people will understandably think of as "Bourne goes to Baghdad," especially in the explosive second half.

Damon plays Chief Warrant Officer Roy Miller (Damon), a U.S. Army stalwart tasked with rooting out and destroying WMD sites at the start of the Iraq War. This seems an almost comical job, viewed through the 20/20 lens of history, but Miller is convinced that the "intel" on the WMDs is reliable and he intends to follow orders.

When bust after bust comes up snake eyes, Miller becomes disillusioned with his work and suspicious of the reasons for it. Damon acquits himself beautifully as Miller, convincingly playing a righteous Army renegade — he seems to have lowered his voice an octave to punch home his words.

It's only when Green Zone devolves into straight Bourne kinetics in the latter going that the film starts to seem less thoughtful and more commercial. Yet it still manages to drive home Miller's essential truth: "The reasons we go to war always matter."

One year later, Jackson kids lead 'normal' lives

They are show business royalty, heirs of the King of Pop. Someday, they will be very rich. But a year after their father Michael Jackson's death, Prince, Paris and Blanket Jackson are normal kids full of fun and pranks, devoted to each other and to their grandmother who is their guardian, according to a lawyer who sees them frequently.

They talk about their father and his presence is everywhere in the ranch-style house in the San Fernando Valley where they live. Pictures and memorabilia adorn the walls. The gated compound has additional residences where other members of the family have lived over the years.

"The children are seemingly as normal as normal can be under pretty extraordinary circumstances," says Adam Streisand, the lawyer who represents Katherine Jackson and a frequent visitor to the compound where she lives with the children. He provided an account of life inside their guarded world in an interview with The Associated Press.

The large Jackson family, including eight of Michael's siblings and their families, has been a source of emotional support for the children, who frequently play with their cousins, Streisand says. And over the past year, Michael Jackson's parents, children and siblings have moved on with their lives in a world with his music but without him.

In an interview with London's Daily Mail, published Sunday, Katherine Jackson said she misses her son every day but sees his spirit in his three children, whom she is raising "a little less strict" than her son would have.

The children love going to the movies, especially action and fantasy films, and are usually transported by security guards who are also on duty at the family compound 24 hours a day. The Jackson kids are avid students of karate and have made friends at their karate classes.

Wrestler Jericho ready for his 'Downfall'

TELEVISION Pro wrestler Chris Jericho is willing to take hits in the ring but will be playing it safe as host of ABC's new game show Downfall.

Downfall is staged atop a 10-story downtown Los Angeles building, with contestants vying for prizes and up to $1 million US cash by taking a trivia quiz. Players face the risk of being pushed off the roof — strapped into a decelerator harness — if they lose.

Jericho is on the rooftop, too, but tethered to a platform to avoid an unexpected trip.

"It's scary when you get up there and stand on the edge," Jericho said. "That's the reason I'm the host. I don't ever have to go over the edge — unless the show gets cancelled, in which case I'm the first one that gets thrown over."

COURTS Michael Jackson's youngest brother says his family is disappointed in a recent ruling allowing a doctor charged in the legendary pop singer's death to keep his medical license, but they have faith in the judicial process. Randy Jackson released a statement yesterday, a week after a Los Angeles Superior Court judge ruled he didn't have the authority to suspend the license of Dr. Conrad Murray. Murray faces an involuntary manslaughter charge in Jack- son's death nearly a year ago. His statement says he is feeling "much better, invigorated and spiritually strong," but did not address what happened.

MORE JACKSON NEWS Poet Maya Angelou is inviting fans of Michael Jackson to be represented in a pointillism portrait of the late singer, who died almost a year ago. Angelou met yesterday at her home in Winston-Salem, N.C., with artist David Ilan, who is putting together the tribute.

Sudoku

For more/less challenging Sudoku puzzles, visit metronews.ca

HOW TO PLAY: Digits 1 through 9 will appear once in each zone – one zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine zones in the puzzle. Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same zone, row across or column down the entire puzzle.

ARIESMARCH 21-APRIL 20

For every effect there must be a cause and your task today is to find out why certain less than welcome events occurred.

TAURUSAPRIL 21-MAY 21

You may honestly believe that there is nothing you cannot do but don't get so carried away that you make an embarrassing mistake.

LIBRASEPT 23-OCT 23

You may think you know what you want but Uranus, planet of surprises, could upset your plans if you take anything for granted.

SCORPIOOCT 23-NOV 22

You seem to be finding it hard to put your thoughts into words at the moment, but that's okay because it's actions that count.

GEMINIMAY 22-JUNE 21

Try not to rely too much on other people today. They may sound convincing but they probably don't know what they are talking about.

SAGITTARIUSNOV 23-DEC 21

You may have come through recent difficulties relatively unscathed but don't push your luck.

CANCERJUNE 22-JULY 22

Something will catch you out or take you by surprise today, but chances are you won't mind. You'll try anything once — more if you like it.

CAPRICORNDEC 22-JAN 20

Others may think that your ideas are mad, bad or even dangerous, but who cares about them? The more others complain the more you'll enjoy it.

LEOJULY 23-AUG 23

Be careful you don't agree to something that is not in your best interests. You may want to help others but it's your happiness that counts.

AQUARIUSJAN 21-FEB 18

You have kept your passions under strict control in recent weeks, but now you need an outlet for all that pent-up emotional energy.

VIRGOAUG 24-SEPT 22

You are entitled to feel pleased with what you have achieved in recent weeks, but don't stop there. That was just the first stage.

PISCESFEB 19-MARCH 20

You have taken a wrong turning and need to retrace your footsteps to the point where you wandered away from the path you were supposed to take.

This day in history

1825: The British Parliament abolishes feudalism and the seigneurial system in British North America.

1898: Spanish-American War: United States Marines land in Cuba.

Metro Recipe of the Day*Grilled Salmon Salad

orange juice, soy sauce and honey to seeds; add salt and pepper. Lay salmon in dish and turn to coat. Cover and marinate 30 minutes.

3. Preheat broiler. Place salmon on broiler pan and broil 4 to 5 minutes on one side only; salmon fillets should still be slightly translucent in centre. Meanwhile, pour marinade into small pot and bring just to boil.

4. Arrange salad greens on four plates. Scatter mango, papaya and orange over. Place cooked salmon on top and drizzle with warm marinade. Serve immediately.
